

Contents

Chapter		Page
	Introduction: Why we wrote this book	9
1	Discovery; later sightings; treaties; the Nootka Sound Convention	12
	1.1 Papal bulls	12
	1.2 The discovery of the Falkland Islands	13
	1.3 Early maps; the Portuguese connection	15
	1.4 Later maps; later sightings	21
	1.5 The treaties that were not broken	24
	1.6 Britain's abandoned plan to survey the Falklands in 1749-50	25
	1.7 The misrepresented treaty: the Nootka Sound Convention limits Spanish sovereignty	26
	1.8 Conclusion	30
2	The first inhabitants; the First Falklands Crisis, 1767-1771	31
	2.1 The first inhabitants, 1764	31
	2.2 The First Falklands Crisis, 1767-71: Part I (Spain versus France)	31
	2.3 The First Falklands Crisis, 1767-71: end of Part I; Parts II and III; the Anglo-Spanish agreement, 22 January 1771	33
	2.4 The "cheerful" British at Port Egmont; the miserable Spaniards at Puerto Soledad	43
	2.5 Britain closes down Port Egmont, but reserves the right to return	45
	2.6 New industries for the Falklands – sealing and whaling; Port Egmont destroyed	45
	2.7 Spain's sovereignty in the islands to 1811 and its limitations	46
3	Uti possidetis – did Argentina inherit the Falklands from Spain?	49
4	The years 1811-25	54
	4.1 An insignificant act	54
	4.2 The Spanish withdrawal from the Falklands, 13 February 1811	54
	4.3 Non-displays of Argentine sovereignty in the Falklands, 1811-1820	54
	4.4 An irrelevant letter, 1816	56
	4.5 The wreck of the Isabella ; Captain Barnard marooned in the Falklands, 1813-14	57
	4.6 David Jewett; Argentina's supposed "official taking of possession of the islands in 1820"	58
	4.7 David Jewett: the myths	70
	4.8 The years 1821-1824; Spain protests to the United States, 1822	74
	4.9 Louis Vernet; the 1824 expedition	76
	4.10 The years 1824-5; the United Provinces do not include the Falklands in their territory	84
	4.11 Spain protests to Britain, 1825	85
	4.12 The Treaty of Amity, 1825	86
	4.13 The year 1825: no Argentine presence in the Falklands; the Beaufoy in the islands	86
	4.14 Conclusion	87
5	Louis Vernet's five years in the Falklands, 1826-31	88
	5.1 Louis Vernet's five years in the Falklands: some basic facts	88
	5.2 Louis Vernet's five years in the Falklands: Phase I, 1826-8	90
	5.3 Britain not informed about Vernet's concession, 1826	90
	5.4 Louis Vernet's five years in the Falklands; Phase I (continued), to 1828	91
	5.5 Louis Vernet's five years in the Falklands: Phase II, 1828-9	95
	5.6 Vernet's 1828 concession declared invalid by the Argentine government, 1882	95
	5.7 Britain again not informed of Vernet's concession, 1828; he preferred British sovereignty	96
	5.8 Emilio Vernet's diary; a British flag hoisted in the Falklands, 25 May 1828	98
	5.9 Vernet buys horses and black slaves for the Falklands	99
	5.10 Vernet's Spanish map	100
	5.11 Lavalle's coup; HMS Tribune ; Antonio Rivero; Vernet appointed CPM; his circular	101
	5.12 Mathew Brisbane's rescue of the castaways from the Hope	103

5.13	Incorrect account by Kohen and Rodríguez of Brisbane’s rescue of the men of the Hope	104
5.14	Vernet’s offer to Woodbine Parish; private versus public functions	105
5.15	The presidio; the Tiburtina wrecked; Parish informs London of Vernet’s concessions	106
5.16	Louis Vernet’s five years in the Falklands: Phase III, 1829-1831	107
5.17	Britain protests against the comandancia decree, 19 November 1829	108
5.18	So-called acts exercising a public function and/or Argentine sovereignty	108
5.19	The “Águila” myth	109
5.20	The money myth – Vernet’s truck system	113
5.21	Conclusion	116
6	The Second Falklands Crisis, 1831-1833	117
6.1	Vernet’s “Advertisement”, 1831	117
6.2	Emilio Vernet’s movements; more people for Port Louis	119
6.3	The Second Falklands Crisis, Part I: Vernet seizes three American ships	121
6.4	Britain’s warning to Vernet not to molest British ships	123
6.5	Vernet’s illegal contract with Captains Congar and Davison	124
6.6	The United States Supreme Court rules that Vernet’s seizures were illegal	124
6.7	The Superior sails; Vernet’s contract with the Belleville men	125
6.8	Vernet’s land-contract with William Langdon; Vernet’s English map	126
6.9	Vernet leaves the Falklands; he appoints William Smyley	127
6.10	The United States reacts to Vernet’s seizures of American ships	128
6.11	Louis Vernet’s misunderstanding of the Lexington ’s purpose	131
6.12	The Second Falklands Crisis, Part II: the Lexington raid	131
6.13	Captain Congar returns to New York	136
6.14	Britain reacts to reports of American activity in the Falklands	136
6.15	Impasse in Buenos Aires – Francis Baylies breaks off US-Argentine diplomatic relations	137
6.16	Argentina sends a ship and a commandant	139
6.17	Britain protests against the appointment of Mestivier	140
6.18	Commandant Mestivier arrives; the Clio and the Tyne set off for the Falklands	140
6.19	Mestivier murdered; the Argentine garrison goes on the rampage	142
6.20	Pinedo carries on harassing American ships; Joseph Trott’s revenge	144
6.21	The murderers caught; the garrison prepares to leave; Argentina reneges on its debts	145
6.22	The Second Falklands Crisis, Part III: the Clio arrives; Pinedo returns to Port Louis	146
6.23	The Second Falklands Crisis, Part III (con.): no Part IV (no second Lexington raid)	150
6.24	The Second Falklands Crisis, Part III (con.): those expelled and those not expelled	150
6.25	The Expulsion Myth	155
6.26	Kohen and Rodríguez confuse two Rapids	157
6.27	Britain in the 1830s was anti-colonialist	157
6.28	HMS Tyne arrives and leaves again	158
6.29	Argentine protests begin, 1833 – and end, 1849	158
6.30	The Clio reaches port; 4 versions of Onslow’s report; trials of Pinedo and the mutineers	159
6.31	The year of limbo; Charles Darwin’s first visit, 1833; the “1833 Port Louis Log”	160
6.32	The Port Louis murders, 26 August 1833	162
6.33	The Rivero Myth	164
6.34	The inhabitants struggle to survive, August 1833-January 1834; several captured	166
6.35	Henry Smith arrives	167
6.36	Charles Darwin’s second visit, 1834; the murderers’ odyssey	168
6.37	Why was Rivero not put on trial? Kohen’s and Rodríguez’s false assumption	169
6.38	The British government considers withdrawing the British presence	172
6.39	The US Supreme Court rules, 1839: Vernet’s seizures of ships were illegal in US law	173
6.40	Conclusion	174

7	The years 1840-1850; the end of Argentina's title	175
7.1	Population developments; lands granted to both British and non-British inhabitants	175
7.2	The establishment of the colony; the first Governor	176
7.3	Sir William Molesworth's suggestion, I, 25 July 1848 – not repeated in 1849	178
7.4	The Anglo-French intervention around the River Plate	179
7.5	Peace negotiations; Henry Southern arrives, October 1848	180
7.6	Sir William Molesworth's suggestion, II, 26 June 1849: no mention of the Falklands	182
7.7	The Chelsea pensioners; Henry Southern notes Argentine acquiescence	183
7.8	Palmerston's Commons statement, 27 July 1849: Argentina's acquiescence	185
7.9	No protest from Buenos Aires; the Moreno-Palmerston exchange	186
7.10	Press reports of the Convention of Peace	188
7.11	The Convention of Peace: what it says – and what Kohen and Rodríguez suppress	188
7.12	The Convention of Peace: what it does not say – and what Kohen and Rodríguez distort	194
7.13	The so-called "Arana-Southern treaty" was a peace treaty	197
7.14	What Kohen and Rodríguez did not know: Southern quashes Rosas's attempt to raise the Falklands question	198
7.15	Argentine protests, 1833-1849; Argentina's symbolic last protest, 27 December 1849	200
7.16	Critical date, 15 May 1850: the Convention of Peace is ratified; end of the Argentine title	202
7.17	Later opinions of the Convention of Peace	204
7.18	The Le Prédour treaties, 1850	208
7.19	No Argentine protests after the Convention of Peace	209
7.20	Conclusion	210
8	The years 1850-1890	211
8.1	The fall of the Rosas dictatorship, 1852; Argentina breaks apart	211
8.2	The Falklands not mentioned in debates on drafting the 1854 Buenos Aires constitution	212
8.3	The Germantown incident, 1854	213
8.4	Non-evidence of Argentina's lack of acquiescence	214
8.5	The Falklands not mentioned in debates on drafting the Argentine constitution, 1860	215
8.6	Argentina becomes reunited, but does not resume protesting	216
8.7	Argentina's acquiescence in Britain's possession of the Falklands	216
8.8	Acquisitive prescription; protests	217
8.9	Court cases, I: the Beagle Channel case, 1977	218
8.10	Court cases, II: the Libya/Chad case at the International Court of Justice, 1994	220
8.11	Nullum tempus : the legitimist view of sovereignty; eternal titles; limits of prescription	220
8.12	"Historical ties": is Argentina's claim to title or to historical title?	224
8.13	"Background sovereignty": historical ties vs legal ties of territorial sovereignty	225
8.14	Effective territorial possession	226
8.15	Foreign consulates imply recognition	227
8.16	Argentina protests against the presence of a Uruguayan consulate in Stanley, 1952	229
8.17	The significance of the visit of the Spanish expedition, 1863	230
8.18	Acts by Argentina that showed acquiescence in Britain's possession of the Falklands	232
8.19	Another Falklands family – the Goss family	234
8.20	British acts of sovereignty (« effectivités ») in the Falklands in the 1850s, 60s and 70s	236
8.21	International recognition: the UPU; a new Falklands industry; no Argentine protests	238
8.22	Maps; the 1882 Latzina map; Argentina's inconsistency, I	238
8.23	The Affair of the Map: Phase I, 1884-5; Britain protests	244

8.24	Estoppel	249
8.25	Arthur Barkly in the Falklands, March-December 1886	251
8.26	The Affair of the Map: Phase II, 1887-8; Argentina's last protest	252
8.27	The foundation of the Falkland Islands Magazine , 1889	254
8.28	More Argentine maps and books fail to claim the Falkland Islands	255
8.29	The Heligoland Connection; Classic Imperialism, 1890: land before people	257
8.30	Conclusion	261
9	The years 1890-1955	262
9.1	Argentina's inconsistency, II: British arbitration over Argentina's territory, I, 1899-1902	262
9.2	Feeble examples from Kohen and Rodríguez	264
9.3	No mention of the Falklands in the Argentine Messages to Congress	264
9.4	More feeble examples from Kohen and Rodríguez	266
9.5	Two faulty books: Groussac 1910 and Goebel 1927	267
9.6	South Georgia and the Falkland Islands Dependencies	268
9.7	Conclusion	274
10	The people; self-determination; the Falklands at the United Nations	276
10.1	The people, I	276
10.2	Louis Vernet's problems; the Lavalleja connection	280
10.3	Vernet eventually claims, and receives, compensation from Britain	283
10.4	The people, II	283
10.5	Plebiscites; referendums	285
10.6	The Falklands referendum, March 2013	287
10.7	The Falklands at the UN, I	289
10.8	The resolution Argentina misuses – UN Resolution 1514 (XV), 14 December 1960	290
10.9	The resolution Argentina never mentions – UN Resolution 1541 (XV), 15 December 1960	293
10.10	The territoriality of self-determination	297
10.11	Argentina's worries; the C24	298
10.12	The Falklands at the UN, II: Britain's and Argentina's statements, 8 September 1964	299
10.13	Amateur Argentine invasions of the Falklands: Miguel Fitzgerald, 8 September 1964	301
10.14	The Falklands at the UN, III: José María Ruda's erroneous speech, 9 September 1964	301
10.15	UN Resolution 2065 (XX), 16 December 1965; Bonifacio del Carril's specious theory	307
10.16	Interests versus wishes: UN Resolution 2065 misused by Argentina	311
10.17	The UN International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), 16 December 1966: all peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories have the right to self-determination	311
10.18	UN Resolution 2625 strengthens Resolutions 1514 and 1541; ignored by Argentina	312
10.19	The 1960s and 70s; more amateur invasions, 1966 and 1968; Argentina treats UN Resolution 2065 as void, February 1976	314
10.20	Kohen's and Rodríguez's misunderstanding of the Falklands constitution	316
10.21	Court cases, III: the Western Sahara case at the International Court of Justice, 1975	317
10.22	Argentina's inconsistency, III: British arbitration over Argentina's territory, II, 1964-6	318
10.23	Another Resolution "emptied" by Argentina: UN Resolution 31/49, 1 December 1976	319
10.24	The Third Falklands Crisis – the unmentioned war, 1982; the Falklands at the UN, 1982, 1986, 1987 and later	320
10.25	Transitory disposition – Argentina's claim enshrined (but destroyed), August 1994	328
10.26	Argentina's failed attempt to move the goalposts at the UN, 2008	330
10.27	Ban Ki-moon affirms the universality of self-determination, 2016	331
10.28	Self-determination: the Chagos connection	332
10.29	Territorial integrity, I: the Kuwait connection	338
10.30	Court cases, IV: Territorial integrity, II: the Kosovo case at the International Court of Justice, 2010	339
10.31	Conclusion: the Falklands are not part of Argentina	340
11	Summary of conclusions	342
	GLOSSARY OF TERMS, ABBREVIATIONS AND CONVENTIONS	351
	Select Bibliography	354